There are four things or "keys" every customer needs and wants:

- 1. Quality
- 2. Service
- 3. Satisfaction
- 4. Appreciation

Make sure you do your best to consistently provide for those needs and wants for your customer, and the benefits will extend both to you and your customer.

Do you leave the responsibility for phone contact with your customer by wrongly asking them to call you back or do you take the proper initiative and place phone calls to them yourself?

Attitude is the key to job satisfaction, customer satisfaction, and productivity. It is also a matter of choice. Even though you may not be able to control the world or current events, you can control what sort of attitude you have toward them and yourself.

The way you perceive the world directly affects how you see your own life. If you have a good attitude, nothing is insurmountable. But if your attitude leans toward the negative, you'll see any problems along the way as stumbling blocks rather than opportunities.

Attitudinal Checklist- The mental "checkup from the neck-up"

SCORING INSTRUCTIONS:

Give yourself-

10 points for each check in the "Always" column;
6 points for the "Usually" column;
1 point for the "Seldom" column.

If you have 90-100 points, your attitude is a positive asset, and you are productive.

If your score was 80-89, your attitude is generally positive, but may not be consistently so.

If your score is below 80, you may want to reassess your behaviors and make some changes.

MY SCORES:

Always = 10 Points	Usually = 6 Points	Seldom = 1 Point	Total Points

Employee Behavior

When surveyed by a national publication, customers listed the following behaviors as those they hoped to find in the companies with which they dealt.
They hope to find employees who were:

Well-informed
Empathetic
Considerate
Sincere

Sociable
Willing to expose their sense of humor
Direct, but not rude

Are these qualities you, too, hope to experience in your own association with the people who serve you?

If everyone followed the Golden Rule, the world would be a better place. Regardless of how the world behaves, though, you could contribute to making the world better by analyzing and improving (where necessary) your attitude and, in turn, your customer service.

Clients are counting on you to be there for them. A successful Mortgage Loan Specialist should have a positive attitude and enough world perspective to realize that treating clients with respect and courtesy only helps that MLS's success. Your businesses and personal success counts on it!
